ABSTRACT

This directory lists by name and address all public schools functioning as "middle" schools in the United States during 1970-71. Each State superintendent of public instruction provided a current directory or a listing of schools from which the list of 971 middle schools was compiled. For comparative purposes, the findings of two earlier studies are included in a table indicating the number of middle schools by State. The schools are listed alphabetically by and within States. PUBLIC MIDDLE SCHOOLS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1970-71

The purpose of this study was to identify by name and address all public schools in the United States which were functioning with the title "middle school" during 1970-71. Each state superintendent of public instruction was requested to provide a current source of the desired information. In most cases this was a state educational directory, although some superintendents provided a special list of names and addresses of schools within their state which met the prescribed criteria. Follow-up letters were sent to other state officials as required to elicit the desired information. No attempt was made to determine whether the schools identified as "middle schools" were actually operating a program of instruction consistent with the philosophical ideals regarding the middle school set forth by many authors. The writer acknowledges that some of the "middle schools" appearing in the following listing may be middle schools in name only, and that there may be schools which function under a true middle school philosophy but which are not titled "middle school." The writer further acknowledges that while extreme care was taken in the preparation of the list, errors of omission may have occurred.

A table indicating the number of schools by state operating under the title "middle school" in the United States in 1970-71 has been included. For comparative purposes Alexander's 1967-68 findings and Cuff's 1965-66 findings are included in the table. Their studies, while similar to the writer's, differ in the definition of the term "middle school." Alexander sought "a school which combines into one organization and facility certain school years (usually grades 5-8 or 6-8) which have in the past usually been separated in elementary and secondary schools under such plans as the 6-3-3, 6-2-4, and 6-6."[1] Further, his study "excluded schools identified as not having at least three grades and those having more than five grades, and those not including grades 6 and 7."[2] Alexander identified 1,101 such schools.

Cuff defined "middle school" as a school which "had grades 6 and 7 and did not extend below grade 4 or above grade 8."[3] He found 499 such schools.

This writer used only the criterion that the school use the term "middle school" in its official name in order that it be considered a middle school. Nine hundred seventy-one were identified.
